

Hanna donors get free access to new estate planning hotline

Unclear why you need an estate plan? Uncertain what the government has in mind for you if you have no estate plan? Unsure of the difference between a will and a living trust?

Call Hanna Boys Center's new estate planning hotline at 415-457-7482.

Our planned giving specialist, Phil Murphy, will provide you with answers to these and other estate planning questions confidentially and without charge or obligation.

He can also provide you with a free estate planning organizer that defines legal terms, helps you inform your family of the whereabouts of important documents, and gives you a place to store your complete estate plan.

Not a substitute for qualified legal advice, the hotline can help you prepare to meet with an estate planning attorney. Hanna Boys Center wants all its supporters to have up-to-date estate plans. Also, charitable bequests from Hanna donors support the education and betterment of the boys entrusted to our care.

A complete estate plan does far more than distribute assets at death. It can protect you from avoidable legal fees and court costs during life in case of accident or illness and protect your family from confusion and dissension. Call 415-457-7482 today.
